ABSTRACT

A web service method, system, and program product for providing imaging conversion services on content, comprising the steps of: receiving content; obtaining a style sheet; selecting an imaging conversion program based on a criteria; converting the content using the selected imaging conversion program to obtain converted content; and transmitting the converted content to a desired location.